Dear Members of the Texas Legislature,

As you are likely aware, more than half of maternal deaths in Texas occur 60 days or more after delivery, or exactly when new mothers lose all Medicaid benefits. 68 percent of these deaths involved women who were enrolled in Medicaid at the time of delivery. Lamentably, the majority of these maternal deaths were preventable, with diseases like diabetes, hypertension, and heart disease among the leading causes of death.

House Bill 1110 by Representative Sarah Davis takes the common-sense step of extending the existing maternal Medicaid benefit from 60 days after delivery to 12 months. The Committee Substitute clarifies that women who experience a miscarriage are also eligible for the extended Medicaid benefit.

Presently, lack of access to care often results in health complications becoming increasingly severe, or worse, ending a new mother's life. This lack of access also prevents new mothers from getting a variety of screenings and treatments for other disease as well, including postpartum depression. As a result, the Texas Maternal Mortality and Morbidity Taskforce's top recommendation in its September 2018 report was "increasing access to health services during the year after pregnancy."

Extending the existing maternal Medicaid benefit will help reduce healthcare costs, uncompensated emergency room visits and preventable deaths. It will make it less likely that children will interact with the state's foster care or criminal justice systems, leading to further cost savings in the future. HB 1110 is a forward-thinking piece of legislation that will help keep new mothers alive and new families intact. Most importantly, it is simply the right thing to do. Please join me in supporting HB 1110.

Sincerely,

Sylvester Turner,

Mayor
